As is known to all, global warming is a tough problem that we are facing today. According to the UN report, animal husbandry is one of the key factors for emitting greenhouse gases. In the meanwhile, our animal husbandry demands more and more water, energy, grain and land resources. Thus, if human beings can eat less meat, they not only can decrease the rate of having diseases like obesity and heart disease, but also can save many creatures' lives.

Molter Rober and Hao Wenjie (R & D Director of Shang Dafu Functional Gourmet Corner) presented western and Chinese gourmet food respectively.

The participants were actively participating.
